

Referee and Judge Accreditation Process

1. DEFINITIONS

"state" in this document includes the Northern Territory and the Australian Capital Territory.

"national tournament" means the Australian Boxing Championships, or any competition approved by BAI's R&J Committee as suitable for assessment of candidates to national level.

"state championship" means the annual championships of a BAI Member Association, or any competition approved by BAI's R&J Committee as suitable for assessment of candidates to state level.

"officiate" means to carry out officially appointed duties as a judge, referee or jury member at a tournament.

2. GENERAL CONDITIONS

For all levels of accreditation, a person must be, and remain, an amateur as defined in BAI's constitution.

For all levels of accreditation, the relevant body (BAI, Oceania or AIBA) shall determine which tournaments are suitable for assessment of candidates.

The staging of a tournament at any level does not guarantee that candidate assessments will be able to be performed at that particular event.

3. LEVELS OF ACCREDITATION

There are three levels of accreditation in Australia: Regional, State and National.

The regional level is reserved for situations where a candidate is available to officiate at local tournaments in remote locations but has not been assessed on use of the computer scoring system. A regional referee or judge is qualified to officiate at any tournament within Australia with the exception of state, national or international tournaments. Regional R&J can only officiate at a tournament when there is at least one R&J present who is accredited to State level or above.

Regional accreditation is NOT a pre-requisite for state accreditation. Regional level is an option which some states and territories may find useful in remote areas, but which is not expected to be used elsewhere.

State accreditation is a pre-requisite for national level accreditation.

3.1 REGIONAL LEVEL

(a) Regional Level - Judge

A candidate must:

- i. attend a BAI R&J Accreditation Seminar/Course
- ii. pass an oral or written examination on AIBA/BAI rules
- iii. pass a practical assessment demonstrating accuracy and consistency of judging of video bouts
- iv. complete trial judging at one or more tournaments and attain a satisfactory standard of accuracy and consistency using an AIBA scoring calculator or a tally counter.

(b) Regional Level - Referee:

A candidate must:

- i. be a regional accredited judge
- ii. attend a BAI R&J Accreditation Seminar/Course

- iii. pass an oral or written exam on AIBA/BAI rules
- iv. demonstrate a satisfactory standard of refereeing performance at a minimum of 10 bouts within 12 months. This includes an assessment of mobility and fitness.

(c) Examination

Candidates for regional referee or judge accreditation may be examined at any tournament which BAI's R&J Committee deems suitable for candidate examination.

3.2 STATE LEVEL

(a) State/Territory Level - Judge

A candidate must:

- i. attend a BAI R&J Accreditation Seminar/Course
- ii. pass an oral or written examination on AIBA/BAI rules
- iii. pass a practical assessment demonstrating accuracy and consistency of judging of video bouts
- iv. complete trial judging at tournaments and attain a satisfactory standard of accuracy and consistency using computer scoring.

(b) State/Territory Level - Referee:

A candidate must:

- i. be a State accredited judge
- ii. attend a BAI R&J Accreditation Seminar/Course
- iii. pass an oral or written exam on AIBA/BAI rules
- iv. demonstrate a satisfactory standard of refereeing performance at a minimum of three tournaments or 20 bouts within 12 months. This includes an assessment of mobility and fitness.

(c) Examination

Candidates for State referee or judge accreditation may be examined at any state tournament which BAI's R&J Committee deems suitable for candidate examination.

(d) Extent of qualification

A State referee or judge is qualified to officiate at any tournament within Australia with the exception of national or international tournaments.

(e) Progression from regional level

A person accredited to regional level may progress to state level if he/she completes trial judging at tournaments and attains a satisfactory standard of accuracy and consistency using computer scoring.

A regional level referee will not progress to state level referee until he/she attains state level judge accreditation.

3.3 NATIONAL LEVEL

(a) National Level - Judge

A candidate must:

- i. have held a State judge accreditation for not less than 1 year subject only to clause 3.3 (f) below.
- ii. have judged at a minimum of 30 bouts using computer scoring in the 12 months prior to assessment for national level
- iii. nominate through BAI to be examined at a national tournament
- iv. pass an oral or written exam on AIBA/BAI rules
- v. demonstrate a satisfactory standard of accuracy and consistency using computer scoring

(b) National Level – Referee

A candidate must:

- i. have held state referee accreditation for not less than one year subject only to clause 3.3 (f) below.
- ii. have refereed at least 30 bouts in the 18 months prior to assessment for national level
- iii. nominate through BAI to be examined at a national tournament
- iv. pass an oral exam on AIBA/BAI rules
- v. demonstrate a satisfactory standard of refereeing performance, including an assessment of mobility and fitness.

(c) Examination

Candidates for national referee or judge accreditation may be examined at any national tournament which BAI's R&J Committee deems suitable for candidate examination.

(d) Extent of qualification

A national referee or judge is qualified to officiate at any tournament within Australia with the exception of an international tournament.

(e) Sequence

A candidate may seek both referee and judge national qualification simultaneously but may not be accredited as a national referee unless he/she is successfully accredited as a national judge.

(f) Fast-tracking

Where a person shows exceptional ability he/she may be permitted to nominate for national accreditation despite having held state accreditation for less than one year. Such permission may be given by the BAI R&J Committee on the written recommendation of the Member Association's R&J co-ordinator.

4. RECOGNITION OF QUALIFICATIONS GAINED OVERSEAS

Referees and judges who were accredited to national level in another country and who have since become Australian citizens and are resident in Australia may apply to have their former national R&J qualifications recognised. The process for recognition is as follows:

- i. Apply to the R&J Committee through BAI and provide evidence of their former qualifications;
- ii. Officiate at a national tournament and be assessed as competent.

Where the R&J is Continental or AIBA qualified he/she shall advise AIBA through BAI to record their new country of residency. Approved residents who are not yet Australian citizens will not be considered for representative duties but may officiate at national or state level in Australia.

5. ACCREDITATION ASSESSORS

(a) Regional level

The assessment of a candidate for regional-level accreditation as a judge or referee shall be carried out by a panel of at least two members, being:

- One or two members of the BAI R&J Committee, and
- A state-accredited referee from the candidate's state, selected by the BAI R&J Committee.

The panel shall notify the BAI R&J Committee of the names of candidates and the result of their assessments.

(b) State level

The assessment of a candidate for state-level accreditation as a judge or referee shall be carried out by a panel of at least two members, being:

- One or two members of the BAI R&J Committee, and
- A state-accredited referee from the candidate's state, selected by the BAI R&J Committee.

The panel shall notify the BAI R&J Committee of the names of candidates and the result of their assessments.

(c) National Level

The assessment of a candidate for national-level accreditation as a judge or referee shall be carried out by a panel of at least two members, being:

- One or two members of the BAI R&J Committee, and
- One AIBA-qualified R&J selected by the BAI R&J Committee.

The panel shall notify the BAI R&J Committee of the names of candidates and the result of their assessments.

6. MAINTENANCE OF ACCREDITATION

- (a) All regional referees or judges operating in Australia, including those with Continental and/or AIBA qualifications, must attend a BAI R&J seminar yearly.
- (b) A regional R&J official shall officiate to a satisfactory standard at least once every year at a tournament. Where a regional R&J official does not maintain his/her accreditation that person cannot officiate at any tournament until re-qualified in accordance with clause 3 of this policy.
- (c) A state R&J official shall officiate to a satisfactory standard at least once every two years at a state championships. Where a state R&J official does not maintain his/her accreditation, that person cannot officiate at state level until re-qualified in accordance with clause 3 of this policy.
- (d) A national R&J official shall officiate to a satisfactory standard at least once every three years at a national level. Where a national R&J official does not maintain his/her accreditation, that person cannot officiate at a national level until re-qualified in accordance with clause 3 of this policy.
- (e) An R&J whose Continental or AIBA accreditation lapses must maintain his/her accreditation at state or national level in accordance with this policy, in order to be eligible to officiate at state or national level respectively.
- (f) A judge or referee who maintains his/her accreditation at state or national level, and has previously held a Continental or AIBA accreditation which has since lapsed, may wear his/her Continental/AIBA R&J badge while officiating at a tournament but is not eligible to officiate at any international tournament until re-qualified in accordance with AIBA rules.

7. TRANSITION

Upon implementation of this accreditation process, all R&J officials will retain their current level of accreditation, provided however that any state level R&J who has not been assessed as competent using computer scoring shall be reduced to regional level accreditation.

This accreditation process shall be read in conjunction with the seminar process.
